With a dense territorial network (45 sites), proximity is an asset and a strong differentiator for Inetum that allows it to address the continuously evolving needs of its clients and to enable each of its 27,000 employees worldwide to live their Positive digital flow.

In France, and more specifically in the South-West, the signing of two major contracts in the industrial and banking sector marks a new stage in the Group's business growth plan. Now with more than 900 employees, the Toulouse office is reinforcing the ranks of Inetum's 10,000 professionals in France and is recruiting more than 150 cloud and infrastructure service experts.

To be as close as possible to its clients from day to day and to meet the needs of Toulouse companies, Inetum is aiming to recruit 80 new people over the next six months, specifically for the jobs of:

- DevOps engineer
- Cloud engineer
- Linux system engineer
- Microsoft infrastructure engineer
- System engineer, monitoring specialist
- System engineer, Citrix specialist
- Network and security engineer
- Database engineer
- Backup engineer
- Storage engineer
- Production engineer
- Production project manager
- Cloud & DevOps administrator
- System & virtualisation administrator

"Strengthening Inetum's team of experts is an ongoing priority to support our local clients' business in all regions where we operate. We provide local support for their national and international projects in all sectors," says Xavier Leleu, who heads regional operations for Inetum in France.

"In the South-West region, it's an opportunity for people to join a corporate project that combines career and professional growth with the work flexibility and ambiance of an international group," adds Didier Pouy, Head of Infrastructure Services at Inetum in the South-West region. According to Pierre Charles Pappalardo, Head of Inetum's office in Toulouse, "These new contracts won by Inetum in the region will strengthen the Group's sector expertise thanks to the recruitment of 80 professionals for our local team."
